Overview

- Context – clear/surface web and dark web
- Quantitative data on reasons for buying and not buying drugs from Silk Road from Global Drug Survey
- New qualitative data – our current study
- Conclusions and implications

Context

- Surface web (Clear web)
 - Websites selling NPS
 - Social media
 - Drug discussion forums – largely info seeking
- Hidden web (Dark web)
 - TOR and Bitcoins
 - Silk Road and the newer drug cryptomarket places
 - Dynamic systems - FBI actions etc.

Internet as tool

Internet
as place

Internet as way of being

Annette Markham's three metaphors of the internet

Drug discussion forums

- Largely drug info sharing and seeking (e.g. Bluelight.ru)
- Drug seeking discouraged by moderators –
 - open, public
 - concerns re official pressure/actions
- Is complicated, both:
 - Harm Reduction
 - Counter public health - pleasure – ‘PMA sounds fun’
(See Barratt, Allen & Lenton 2014)
- Have/will DLE and official actions, e.g. increased surveillance of online behaviour, move people to dark net?
- Continue despite other channels (e.g. Facebook) possibly due to increased perception of anonymity, encryption, etc.

Accessing drugs on the surface web

Figure 27: Timeline of major developments and number of new psychoactive substances notified since Council Decision 2005/387/JHA came into effect in May 2005

Note: BZP, 1-benzylpiperazine; NPS, new psychoactive substances; 4-MMC, 4-methylmethcathinone (mephedrone). Internet shops identified by EMCDDA monitoring offered NPS/‘legal highs’ for sale and delivery to at least one EU Member State.

Silk Road – what is / was it?

- The Silk Road is the most well known of, now, a number of online drug marketplaces, similar to eBay, with drug listings, vendor ratings, sales, a discussion forum, etc.
- Silk Road is accessed via Tor, through the hidden web, and drugs are bought using Bitcoin, an encrypted virtual currency.
- Tor & Bitcoin, used correctly, apparently make transactions untraceable.
- Drugs delivered through the postal system in ‘stealth packaging’.
- Normally, funds are only released to vendors when buyers receive their goods and are satisfied with them.

Silk Road timeline

- Online drug market place operated from February, 2011
- June 2011 Gawker article thrust into limelight
- DPR arrest and shutdown 2 Oct, 2013.
- Total number of drug listings:
 - 485 in June 2011,
 - 880 in November 2011,
 - 1159 in March 2012,
 - 6411 in March 2013
 - ~13,000 in October 2013

“The current number of total drug listings is 176% of pre-TSR take down levels. This growth has come with increased competition ...”

“Silk Road 2.0 is the market leader with a 43% market share. TSR had 71% at the time of its seizure.”

“Agora currently carries 26% of drug listings and has seen major growth in listings, as well as credibility, since the hacks of Silk Road 2.0 and Pandora. Agora further differentiates itself from Silk Road 2.0, Pandora, and BlueSky by offering weapons.”

GLOBAL DRUG SURVEY

Global Drug Survey

- GDS is an independent drug use data mapping agency that conducts annual, online, anonymous, surveys.

Limitation: findings are not representative of drug using population

- Questions about access, purchase from Silk Road, & motivations for use/non-use.
- The base sample (n=9470) reported recent drug purchase and resided in the United Kingdom (n=4315, median age 24, 76% male), Australia (n=2761, median age 32, 76% male) or the United States (n=2394, median age 21, 80% male).

GLOBAL DRUG SURVEY

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Aims to understand Silk Road use from a buyer's perspective.
- People who purchased drugs from Silk Road 1.0 were invited to complete anonymous, encrypted, online instant messaging interviews.
- The (n=17) interviews took a life history approach to ascertain drug use trajectories and drug purchasing trajectories, exploring the contexts of online drug purchasing and drug use.
- We are also interested in how drug use and harms are affected by increased access and the availability of a wider range of substances through Silk Road.
- We also discussed their tech context: computer skills, Internet use and experiences of Tor, encryption and Bitcoin.
- Will present some interim results here today

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Wider range of drugs than I can access offline

4:46:32 pm [interviewer]: After reading the gawker article, what was it that motivated you to access SR? ie, what in particular were you going there for?

4:47:31 pm [P21]: initially, it was disbelief, "there's no way that this can be real," sort of thing

4:48:05 pm [P21]: and then i compared the amount and variety of drugs available on there along with the prices to drugs locally

4:48:40 pm [P21]: it just made more sense to order from SR instead of buying locally

- SR drugs are better quality or cheaper than I could access offline

9:13:59 am [P15]: "...I only started really buying consistently out of necessity. I live in an area where the quality of marijuana is not up to par to someone with a tolerance like me. It was very difficult to get medical-grade weed, such that would come from a dispensary. When it was available, it was expensive and there were no price breaks. It just became impractical..."

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- More convenient than purchasing drugs offline

10:24:09 am [P11]: I didn't move online. I was always online, I've never purchased drugs in person. I don't like the idea of it.

10:25:09 am [Interviewer]: what appeals to you about being able to buy cannabis online ...

10:25:48 am [P11]: ...It's so easy to order cannabis online. You pay someone, an anonymous person, anonymously, and the drugs arrive a day later.

10:26:09 am [P11]: No worries, and almost no risk when purchasing domestically.

- Confidence in buying from sellers with high ratings

7:52:08 am [Interviewer]: what made you trust the environment enough to purchase? (or was this not an issue?)

7:55:01 am [P15]: Well, I'm the kind of person that obsessively researches any chemical I'm taking so I know exactly what the risks are, what the dosage should be like, and just safety in general. SR was able to facilitate that because I could pour through a vendor's reviews, as well as read through their forum review thread.

The rating system and feedback were enough to quell any misgivings. It wasn't like I was unfamiliar with how the mail system works in relation to chemicals being sent to me

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- I want to avoid physically meeting with drug dealers in person
1:04:16 pm [P22]: I preferred the experience of buying online really. I could shop around get the product I wanted and it felt much safer.
1:05:01 pm [P22]: Than going to some dodgy car park in the middle of the night to meet some bloke to buy whatever it was he had to sell.
- It's more anonymous to buy drugs through SR
11:16:55 am [P11]: The simplicity of it all. A quick online search, a simple step-by-step guide to follow, and not much later you have illegal substances in your mailbox. And no one knows I did it! (Except the vendor...)

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Avoid having drugs 'pushed' to you

Quote 1

10:31:10 am [P11]: Also regarding purchasing drugs online; I don't like the fact that the [offline] dealer could potentially try to make me buy more (or other) drugs than I want. He can advertise on Silk Road all he wants, but I can choose to ignore it there. I feel that if I meet him in person, he'll be able to... well, act differently. (Could be a she!)

Quote 2

9:00:45 am [P15]: Yes, I've bought locally. It's pretty universal for dealers to oversell their product. The very few that don't are the successful and more business-oriented ones.

The reason there was no pushing on SR was simple- the rating system let the product speak for itself. It's very common for a vendor to get very very high quality product. Once a few orders go out and the great feedback starts building up, vendors can get so many orders that they get swamped and have to temporarily take down their listings while catching up

9:01:58 am [P15]: I saw it happen a lot when the general quality of a particular drug across the entire site is lacking. A vendor will get some great product, word gets out, and everyone flocks to them

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Movements between markets online.

[Interviewer] @ 1:25: so what made you decide to purchase drugs on SR, it seems you had a good supply network already established?

[P24] @ 1:26 everyone was moving to sr to captilise on the traffic and popularity, so even my suppliers were migrating there

[Interviewer] @ 1:27 Can you tell me how your early experiences of purchasing there compared to your previous channels?

[P24] @ 1:29 not much besides the escrow and being able to try new things my other people may have not had access to and the convenience of searching and sorting products

[P24] @ 1:30 I would always read the sr forums daily so i knew what was going on and who i could trust

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Turn to direct dealing after SR seizure

[Interviewer] as you mentioned earlier SR 2.0 is now down and other market places are coming and going pretty quickly. the hub has started up.

[Interviewer] how have you been affected by these changes?

[P16] I window shop on many sources, I'm beginning to have direct deals with known vendors as a first choice more than buying from listings

[P16] I also like to think that I already had my "peak" on online drug purchase.

[line deleted as asynchronous interviewer question]

09:54:26 [P16] and i'm spending less time online on the markets.

The NDRI Silk Road study

(Barratt, Lenton & Maddox, ongoing)

- Middleman

7:17:26 am [Interviewer]: I'd like to talk about how you found out about SR. Can you tell me a bit about what took you there in the first place? (ie motivation to get on it and places where it first came to your attention, for example)

7:19:18 am [P20]: I heard about it through an Internet friend (met in an online discussion forum) whom I haven't met in person, it was exciting to hear that I could discreetly get shipped drugs, especially psychedelics which I had been wanting to get but hadn't previously had the knowledge to acquire otherwise

7:19:48 am [P20]: I also saw the possible profit incentive in getting bulk marijuana mailed

Conclusions

- Although NPS are not the most frequently accessed drugs, there are between country differences which probably reflect local drug market factors.
- motivations for buying drugs online are varied and include
 - Variety of drugs available
 - Quality
 - Convenience
 - Price
 - Confidence provided by online seller rating schemes
- The dynamic nature of the online drug market places, including the impact of drug law enforcement actions and responses to these, means this aspect of the NPS story is one that is rapidly changing.

Conclusions cont.

- Clamping down on surface web drug discussion may send people to dark web
 - Harder to monitor
 - More of a supply/access focus
 - Further marginalisation/distance
- Drug market effects
 - New products rapidly find way into the market
 - Mail delivery of small amounts – clusters of harm
 - Labelling not valid, content & purity unknown
 - Secondary supply – especially for young, inexperienced users
